some never saw any one but the preacher. The pulpit was between the two front doors, and mounted by six steps. In front of the pulpit, was a low platform inclosed with a railing. In this place sat the "Precentors" or the men who led the singing, S. E. Johnson, and J. M. Ferguson. The whole length of the church was divided by two railings separating the men from the women. If by chance some young people could get next to that railing and sing from the same book, it was something pleasant to think of the next few weeks.

Once I returned from school at Raleigh, and spent the vacation with my uncle, Dr. J. N. McNeill, who also lived at Union. During the time a young man visited me (as young men will some times) we attended church, and he entered the women's side with me and sat with me, thinking it was the proper thing to do. I hadn't the courage to tell him it was not the custom for men to sit with the women. I was afraid he would think our neighborhood out of date. Well, that seat was stared out of countenance and shunned as though it had the plague. One dear old lady came in, stopped deliberately in front of us giving us a look of mingled amusement and sarcasm. I didn't hear a word of the sermon. After services, my cousin, Rev. M. D. McNeill, then a mere boy, came to me and said, "Mr. _____ asked me who that was sitting with you today". I told him _____ from Raleigh. He said, "You tell him to go back to Raleigh and stay there until he learns some sense".

It might do better to divide the boys and girls at church. But there came a day when we young people had other thoughts than new clothes, and who would be the fortunate one to get next to the railing. Our pastor, Rev. Martin McQueen, assisted by his brother, Rev. Archie McQueen, held a revival at Union. The young people were seriously impressed. Many were converted, over sixty joined the church. How happy was our pastor that day. I can see him now as he came down the pulpit steps, joining his fingers together (a familiar gesture of his) with that dear smile, we all loved to see. "My young friends, it does my heart good to see you", then broke down. Recovering himself, he said, "Let us sing a song of praise and thanksgiving unto God. Sing 'Crown Him Lord of All', and sing it as loud as you can". We all rose and sang it, the congregation joining.

Oh, those dear old Union days. They are fled. Most who walked the olden ways, Now are dead; the pastor, youth and maid, To the silence have been laid, Where the oak tree's mellow shade, Shadows o'er. Mac H.

Here is a report (apparently from the 1850's) on the Little River Sunday School (held in what is now the Eureka Community). This report was written by Daniel Blue II (son of emigrant "River" Daniel Blue), who appears to have been superintendent at that time. The majority of the Sunday School scholars were young members of the various Blue families:

Little River Sunday School. There is (sic) fifteen regular schoolers attending this school, and ten or fifteen others, including the parents and other young people. The children memorise the Shorter Catechism, portions of the Scripture, and hymns. All join in reading a portion of the Scripture, spend some time in singing.

We commence by reading a chapter, singing, and prayer, and close in nearly the same way. Continually (i.e. we continue) Sunday School during the year. There was a good turn out last Sabbath. When the days are longer we meet in the evening. Each school day an hour prayer meeting which is well attended. I think our school is as promising at this time as at (any) time past, but I am sorry to have to say that there are children in our bounds who do not attend they nor their parents.

IV. VARIOUS BLUE FAMILIES OF NORTH CAROLINA See p. 762

There have been at least five different families of Blues who settled in the Cape Fear Valley of North Carolina. We will mention all of these summarily, although this book is to concentrate on the "Lakeview Blues." J. McN. Johnson in his Genealogical Gleanings, says:

The several Blue families, whose generations are analyzed in this article, have been noted for their thrift and civic righteousness in the counties traversed by the upper reaches of the Cape Fear River and its tributaries; and they are descended from at least five separate migrations of Blues from Scotland to North Carolina, covering the latter half of the eighteenth century, and the first decade of the nineteenth.

There was a man named Malcolm Blue living in Bladen County, North Carolina, long before either of the five families herein referred to came to America, and we find his will, dated in 1752. The writer has no information as to who this man was, or what became of his progeny; but it has been suggested that the Blues scattered throughout the southeastern counties of North Carolina are descended from this man's family.

The first of the five families herein treated is that of Malcolm Blue, who emigrated from North Knapdale, Argytshire, Scotland in the year 1748. He had married Mary Smith of Kentyre, just across the West Loch from his Knapdale home, and three of his children were born in Knapdale.

An old member of the family many years ago informed this writer that his ancestor, Malcom Blue, came from Scotland, with Neill McNeills colony. This cannot be strictly true as McNeill's Colony was planted near Bluff Church in Cumberland County in the year 1735, while Malcom's arrival was 13 years later. He came with the swarm of refugees that fled from the Hanoverian persecution following the collapse of the "Rising of the '45", when Prince Charles Edward's hopes were crushed at the Battle of Culloden in April 1746. Malcom Blue possibly visited McNeill's Colony on his arrival in the Cape Fear Section, but the same year he purchased land at Long Street Church, where he lived and died on the farm which is still in the possession of his descendants and which still bears his name.

The three children born to Malcom Blue and his wife, Mary in North Knapdale, were Daniel, Duncan and John; while those born in America were James, Neill, Dugald and Malcom, and an only daughter, named Sarah.

The present representatives of the family can give an authentic account of the eldest son, Daniel. There is a vague suggestion that he settled in the southern part of Richmond County, and that Dr. Kenneth Blue of Laurinburg, N. C., as well as Hon. Victor Blue of the United States Navy are his descendants. I cannot vouch for the certainty of this suggestion, but give it as it was given to me by a member of the family long since dead.

Duncan, the second son of Malcom, the emigrant, lived in Cumberland County, North Carolina, where he reared a family of two sons and a daughter. The sons' names were Daniel & Neill, the daughter's name was Flora. All these emigrated to the southwest in early life. Duncan died in Cumberland County in the year 1828 at the age of 87 years, he having been born in North Knapdale, Argytshire, Scotland in 1741.

John the third son of Malcom Blue, the emigrant, was born in Scotland in 1745. He died in Fayetteville, North Carolina in 1781, of small-pox, leaving a young family, all of whom moved to Mississippi, and their descendants are unknown to my informants.

James, the fourth son of Malcom Blue, the emigrant, was the progenitor of the present holders of the Long Street Farm.

Neill, the fifth son of Malcom Blue, the emigrant, was born at Longstreet, North Carolina in 1749. He died in Richmond County, N. C. in the year 1800, without issue.

Dugald Blue, the sixth son of Malcom, the emigrant, was born at Longstreet in 1753. He moved to Richmond County in 1774 on attaining his majority, where he married the daughter of A. D. McLauchlin, who also came from North Knapdale. It is said that Dugald's sons all went to the southwest.

Malcom Blue, the seventh and youngest son of Malcom, the emigrant, was born at Longstreet, North Carolina in 1758. He married Miss Flora McGill of Bladen County, North Carolina, and left six daughters, but no sons. He died in Richmond County, N. C. in the year 1806.

Sarah Blue, only daughter of Malcom, the emigrant, was born at Longstreet in 1751. She became the wife of Alexander Watson, removed to Clark County, Alabama, where she died in the year 1822.

The distinguishing characteristics of this family were sterling integrity, thrift and self-reliance. They, as well as the other Blue families herein enumerated, were staunch Presbyterian, and powerful in all that makes for righteousness.

THE MALCOLM BLUE FAMILY

Miss Eva Bowden gives us the following information in her (typed unpublished) "Carolina Blue Genealogy" of 5-1-1961: 18a

Main or First Stem

MALCOLM BLUE (1700-1766) Came to America from Scotland in 1748 (legend) with the Neil McNeil Colony. Native of Cantyre, Argyleshire, Scotland. After landing at Wilmington, North Carolina, he settled on the Cape Fear River, and later removed to what was known as the Longstreet Settlement, about 12 miles northwest of the present town of Fayetteville, Cumberland Co. There came with him his wife, Sarah (Smith) Blue and his first three born children, Duncan, Daniel and John. Children born in America were James, Dugald, Neil, Malcolm and Sarah. His widow survived him 46 years, dying in 1812 at the age of 102. Malcolm had several brothers and sisters, one of whom is thought to have been John who came to America from Scotland in 1755 with the forces of General Braddock.

Second, we trace part of the family of John Blue II (1776-1831) and his wife Effie Gilchrist. John Blue II was the son of John Blue I (1745-1781) and Mary McKay. John Blue I, was the son of Malcolm Blue. Most of this material comes from Lumber River Scots John E. Purcell and others (pp.700-735).¹ I have also incorporated material which Mrs. James E. Griffith of Jackson, Miss. has put me on various descendants of Jennette Blue and husband William Buchanan. Material from Mrs. Griffith will be noted in the text; otherwise my source is Purcell, op.cit.

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN GILCHRIST AND FLORA CURRIE

EFFIE GILCHRIST

Effie Gilchrist, the tenth child of John Gilchrist and the only child of John Gilchrist and Flora Currie, was born June 21, 1796, and died December 5, 1866. Flora Currie, the second wife of John Gilchrist belonged to the well-known Currie family from near Turnpike Bridge on Lumber River. She survived her husband many years and is buried in the old McIntosh Cemetery in Scotland County. The inscription on her gravestone reads:

¹Angus W. McLean, John E. Purcell I, Archibald G. Singletary, John E. Purcell II, Lumber River Scots and Their Descendants: The McLeans, The Purcells, The McIntyres, The Torreys, The Gilchristes, The Estate of Angus Wilton McLean: Lumberton, North Carolina, 1942. This material is quoted by the kind permission of the Honorable Hector MacLean of Lumberton, N.C.

Mrs. Flora Gilchrist, died December 5, 1867.

She must have exercised a great influence on the children of John Gilchrist by his first marriage to Effie McMillan. They were all young at the time she married their father, and some of them were just small children. She was eighty-seven years old at the time of her death and therefore, must have been born in 1760.

Effie Gilchrist married John Blue II who was born in North Carolina, September 28, 1776, and died May 3, 1831. He was the son of John Blue, who was born in Scotland in 1745 and died in 1781. The latter married Mary McKay, who died in 1833. The father of John Blue, Sr., was Malcolm Blue, and his mother was Sarah Smith. They came to North Carolina in Neil McNeill's Colony in 1748 and settled in Cumberland County.

Effie Gilchrist is said to have been a very striking looking woman, tall and stately, with black hair and blue-grey Irish eyes. She inherited good property, not only from her husband but also from her father. She was a strict teetotalist, training up her children never to taste intoxicants, and her three sons adhered to her admonitions. When Sherman's Army passed by, she demanded and received from that General protection for her home, but everything moveable was carried off by the "bummers." The Sunday after the army passed through, the community gathered at Centre Church to take stock of what was left. Mrs. Gilchrist was present with her two daughters, Mary and Margaret, having been conveyed thither in the family "rockaway" drawn by an old blind mule, the only animal the bummers left upon her estate. Her descendants believed that the sorrow and destruction resulting from Sherman's advance north hastened her death by several years. She was buried in the Old Blue Cemetery just across the road from the house where she went as a bride.

John Blue II was left fatherless at the age of five years and must have had a wise mother, for he grew up to be one of the most prominent and highly respected men of his community. Records in Washington show that he served his country in the War of 1812 as captain of a company designated as Captain John Blue's Company, Major Cameron's Command, North Carolina Militia, from July 29, 1812, to November 8, 1813, and from December 1, 1813, to January 29, 1814. On October 6, 1814, he married Effie Gilchrist, the only child of John Gil-

Third, we include some data on part of the family of Malcolm Blue (1758-1806), son of Emigrant Malcolm Blue. This data comes from Mr. Michael Winn of Peoria, Ill., and Mrs. John H. Derby Jr. of Sparks, Nevada.

Malcolm Blue, son of Emigrant Malcolm, married Elizabeth --- . They had:

We have further information on two more descendants of Malcolm Blue: Daniel Blue and John Blue, who were sons of Dugald Blue (1753-1836), the son of Malcolm the emigrant. This information comes from the papers of Eva Bowden. Both of these charts on Daniel and John Blue appear to have been compiled by Robert Blue of California.

This concludes the genealogy of the descendants of Malcolm Blue.

The second of the emigrant Blue families of North Carolina is known as the "Lakeview Blues" - that is, Duncan and Margaret Campbell Blue and their progeny, who came to Moore County in 1769. As this book will concentrate on this particular family, we will reserve comment on them for later chapters.

THE GUINEA BLUE FAMILY

The third family to come over was the "Guinea Blues," John-son says:

For a full generation during and after the Revolutionary War no Scotch settlers came to the Cape Fear Section of North Carolina. It was in the year 1800, when the next family of Blues came. This family consisted of 5 brothers, who were known as the "Guinea Blues", from the fact that they were small of stature. They came from the Island of Jura, and settled at the place now known as Pinebluff, North Carolina.

These brothers were Archibald, Daniel, John L., Peter and Dugald. They were thrifty, keen traders, and noted horse racers, but so rough and uncouth in manners that the Blue family analyzed above disclaimed kinship with these "Guinea Blues".

About the year 1848, all these Blues except John L. removed to the southwest, and their progeny are scattered over Alabama, Mississippi and Texas, and are unknown to this writer.

John L. Blue settled on Mountain Creek in Hoke County, and his sole descendant at this time is Colin L. Blue.

These negative remarks about the Guinea Blues were probably made more in jest than in earnest. At any rate the assessment of these people as rough does not fit in with the actual historical records we possess. Peter Blue (head of the clan) and some of his sons were officers in Bethesda Church and were members of the Pansophia Lodge, both of which were made up of the leading families of early Moore County.
